Study shows that healthcare Industry needs 18.3 lakhs professional while there are only 8.9 lakhs Allied Health Professionals available therefore there is huge shortage of approx. 9 lakhs trained Allied Health Professionals.

These professions are growing and together they make up the second largest health workforce after nurses. Allied health professionals provide essential services on which the health system depends and their skills are in demand worldwide.

There is an immediate need for health care workers in most of the professions, including nursing and allied health. There is and there will be a long-term shortage of qualified health care providers just at the peak when the demand for health care is increasing. The demand for healthcare is increasing because of the aging population and lack of awareness. A large portion of the population is now over 50 years old, just the time of life when there is a higher incidence of disease.
